Mary, I appreciate your position. We will compile our results and summarize our methodologies and share that with you with the draft CIP. Please allow us some time. At that time we can discuss additional information requests you may have.

The community interviews will just be one aspect of EPA's comprehensive approach to community engagement that we expect will span years. I feel it is necessary to keep these interviews confidential to provide anonymity to speak safely and frankly and to help ensure that no information or comments may be attributed to any citizen. My position is that this measure increases the validity of data we collect.

As we draft our CIP, attention will be given to the research and efforts you and CFAC have already produced and we are thankful of the community engagement work you have started.

Thank you for your patience and understanding as we take time to draft the CIP.

Just let me know about the dates and times.

As for the names, I thought we planned to share our research and as a result, I willingly shared the names of those whom I interviewed as well as those who did not respond. I certainly would not share the information outside my office and with the client. The participant list validates the research and the findings.

Great, I will look for some good times that work for Mike and I and will follow up with some proposed dates and times. That may be down the road a little.

I prefer not to share specific names of people we interview for anonymity.

Thanks Mary!

Robert,

I am more than happy for you, Mike, John and me to discuss the path forward with the panel. If you'd like to propose dates and times that work for you and Mike, I will get with John.

Is there a reason you can't share the names of the participants?

Thanks,
Mary

Hi Mary,

We finished interviews last week. It will be a while before we can get a draft CIP out and I will share that with you early to get your feedback and perspective before we finalize.

Attached is the interview template we used. I am not going to share with you our roster of participants but I can tell you we reached a broad representation of stakeholder groups. We did interview several members of the CLP. We received good guidance and feedback that will help build our long term community engagement strategy – we are still in the early phases. We will likely continue with community interviews in the area as a method of finalizing, evaluating, and updating the community involvement plan over time.

One concern that came up worthy of discussion is the role of the CLP and the potential to develop a community advisory group. Wisely, a few of the participants expression caution about duplicating efforts. As a part of a comprehensive strategy, EPA hopes to build upon and complement existing community outreach efforts and I recognize the valuable role the CLP has played to date. Perhaps we can find a time for a phone call to discuss?

Thanks Mary!

Robert,
Would it be possible for you to provide an update on the community assessment? I also would like to see the discussion template you used and know who you met with. I'm interesting to know how folks responded this year as compared to last year.

Many thanks,
Mary
